

HEARST SCORES ANOTHER POINT ON VOTE RECOUNT

May Apply to Any Supreme Court Justice for an Order
Authorizing It.

GAYNOR'S OPINION.

Dissenting Minority of Appellate Division Represented by Justice Jenks.

In the Appellate Division, Brooklyn, to-day, the application of the Corporation Counsel to make permanent his temporary writ of prohibition restraining any Justice of the Supreme Court from issuing an order authorizing the beginning of the recapitulation of the votes cast in Kings and Richmond Counties at the Mayoralty race of 1905, under the terms of the Recount bill, was denied. This was another legal victory for William R. Hearst in his fight to open the ballot boxes.

Some time ago the Corporation Counsel, acting for Mayor McClellan, got from Justice Maddox the temporary restraining order. The Hearst attorneys carried the matter to the Appellate Division.

To-day two opinions were handed down. The majority opinion, which was written by Justice Gaynor and signed by Justices Gaynor, Hooker and Rich, denied the application. Justice Rich, wrote a shorter separate opinion, in which he gave certain added reasons, and which he alone signed.

A dissenting minority opinion was written by Justice Jenks and signed by Justices Jenks and Miller.

As a result the Hearst lawyers are left free to ask any Supreme Court Justice for an order authorizing the recount.

POLICEMAN SAYS MAN ROBBED HIM

Arrested Bridge Car Rider on Word of Woman, Who Vanished.

Policeman James A. Cunningham, of the Church Street Station, told this story to Magistrate Cornell in the Centre Street Police Court to-day.

"I went to Coney Island last evening with my little boy. I returned home about nine o'clock and while riding in a Bridge car, a woman told me she had seen a man pick my pocket. I had not felt a hand, but thirty-four cents which I had put in my coat pocket, had been abstracted. The woman pointed out a young fellow as the thief and I arrested him."

"Did he get your money?" the Magistrate asked.

"I don't know," replied the policeman. "Among the change I put in my pocket was a quarter, a nickel and four pennies, one new one. When I searched the prisoner, I found a fifty-cent piece, a dime and three pennies, a new one among them."

"Where is the woman who said you had been robbed?" inquired Magistrate Cornell.

"I don't know," replied Cunningham. "She wouldn't tell me her name, nor would she accompany me to the station house."

"A funny case, this," remarked the Magistrate, as he called the prisoner, apparently a hard-working man, to the bench.

"The prisoner gave his name as John F. Connelley."

"I am thirty years old," he told the Magistrate, "and have lived at No. 148 Pearl street five years. I have been employed as a paper cutter by one house for six years. I went to Coney Island yesterday with my brother, and was returning home when I was arrested. If you will give me time I will prove that I am not a thief."

Coughlin broke down and wept. Magistrate Cornell remanded him to the Tombs until to-morrow, to give him an opportunity to communicate with his friends.
